

NORTHGATE CROSSING MUD NO. 1

June 1, 2016

Over the Memorial Day weekend of May 27, 2016, Northgate Crossing MUD No. 1 (the "Water District"), experienced torrential rains. The Water District has a levee and pump system ("Levee System") in place to abate flood waters. However, when a historical rain event such as this occurs, resulting in the inundation of the surrounding creeks and streams, the water has no place to go. In such a situation, despite the operation of the Levee System, flooding may occur and require you to evacuate your home. Accordingly, this weekend you received notice of a voluntary evacuation, as it appeared that Spring Creek would crest, resulting in flooding of the surrounding areas. The Water District, along with Judge Ed Emmett, Commissioner Cagle, Senator Bettencourt, the Harris County Flood Control District, and the Harris County Office of Emergency Management worked together to prepare for the evacuation of the Water District. Fortunately the rains stopped, and the nearby streams and creeks subsided enough to allow the level of Spring Creek to drop. As additional rains are forecasted for later this week, the Water District will continue to monitor the levee.

The Water District would like for you to know that it has had in effect for some time an Inclement Weather Policy that provides for manning the levee in storm events. This Water District followed this Policy during this weekend's rain event. In addition to the Policy, the Water District plans to implement a program for notifying its residents of severe weather events through its website (northgategrossingmud1.com) and the Northwood Pines Website. The Water District would also like to notify you by text and email of such storm events, as well as any evacuation procedures, should that become necessary. Finally, the Water District has created a Facebook page (go to: Northgate Crossing MUD 1).

Please take a few minutes of your time to complete the form below so that the Water District can include you on the Emergency Notification List. Your information will not be shared or otherwise distributed.
